Charley Pelton Tells How Jessie Stole His Diamond

EMBRACES CAUSED SUSPICION

Jessie Says She In Not Guilty, Charley Says She Is-News from the City

Courts in Brief.

There was one interesting case in police court yesterday and the few spectators present enjoyed it hugely. It was the examination of Jessie Bryant, arrested on complaint of Contractor Charles Pelton, who alleged that she had pilfered his dismond pin valued at $100. The story, given put-Beity heretofore, was to the effect that Peiton went into the "green room" at Smith's variety, "on business" with his brother-in-law. While he was there, engaged in conversation, Jessie was supposed to have slipped up and stolen his sparkler. On examination vasterday an entirely different state of facts was revealed. Jessie was present. She is not what one would call strikene is not what one would call strikingly handsome, yet her personal appearance is not against her, especially when she is powdered and painted in the usual "chair warmer" fashion.
Beneath an extra coat of "kalsomine"
"glowed a wealth of ancient beauty and impaired health." Charley Petton took the stand and said that he attended the performance at Smith's Ha ed the performance at Smith's. He sat in the body of the house the major portion of the time. Occasionally he visited the bar room for lubricating purposes. On one of these trips he met Harry Wood, who invited him into the "green room" to meet his wife. He had no sooner taken a seat in this room than Jessie, her face wreathed in bewitching smiles, rushed up to him, sat on his lap, put a pair of arms lovingly about his neck and made him welcome. Drinks were indulged in, and then Charley left. When he reached Bowne's saloon he observed that his scentiliating gem had vanished. He at once surmized that the fond embraces of Jessie were responsible, and caused her arrest. Mr. Jenkins, local representative of the Sunday Sun, testified to having seen Pelton in the opera house the evening the diamond was missed. The people closed the side of the case. This mornwill seek to establish her innocence.

ANOTHER WILL SET ASIDE.

Undue Influence Invalidates Mrs. Lampman's Testament.

The will of Charlotte Lampman was seclared void yesterday by a jury in the circuit court. Mrs. Lampman died ast fail, bequeathing a portion of her property to her sister, Lucretia Lowden, and other relatives. Her husband, James Lampman, did not like the provisions of the will, as the balance of the estate, valued at $1,800 was eft to Cornelius L. Dear Sire:—I write that you may know the good I have received from the BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. I am now on the ainth bottle of your wonderful Bitters, and must confess I have received prompt cure of a long standing disease—SCROFULA. I have used dollar after dollars' worth of medicines and received no relief, but the third bottle of B. B. B. I found great est. I have also used three bottles of Burdock Pills; they are the best medicine I ever took. I cannot praise them too highly. I do owe my whole life to them and can recommend them to every living soul that is shilled with that dreadful disease, SCROF-ULA. I was afflicted with lumps as large as an egg in my right side and large lumps on my throat, and my limbs were covered with a burning and itching rash, which very greatly approved me when near the warm stove. I had spent a great deal which very greatly annoyed me when near the warm stove. I had spent a great deal of money trying to get relief, and consulted the best medical treatment in the State, but all in vain, they did me no good whatever, and I had about given up when I thought I would try your medicines, and, thank God, they have cured me.
